The Law School and the Department of Political Science have cooperated to design a dual enrollment program for students who wish to pursue a JD and an MA or PhD in political science or who wish to pursue a JD and an MPA. Students spend the first year in law school courses and at least one year exclusively as a graduate student in Political Science. Other years are spent taking classes from both departments. Some classes have been pre-approved by the Law School and Political Science to count as credit toward both degrees, therefore lessening the amount of time it takes to complete both degrees compared to the time students would be enrolled for the programs separately. Students must be accepted into both programs independently before being accepted into the dual enrollment program.

Note: all of the usual policies of the Law School, Graduate School, and Political Science Department regarding both application requirements and degree completion apply to dually-enrolled students. Please see applicable web sites:

Political Science:  http://www.as.ua.edu/psc/gradhandbook.htm
Graduate School:  http://graduate.ua.edu/
Law School:  http://www.law.ua.edu/

A. Application Process

Students applying to the program must be admitted to the Law School and the Graduate School, and should include all of the materials required of the standard applications. Letters of recommendation should appear in both applications, and it is the applicant’s responsibility to insure that copies of the letters used for both programs are submitted to both the Law School and the Political Science Department. (It is also recommended that applicants make their recommenders aware of their application to the dual enrollment program.)

Applicants must pay the application fees of both the Law School and the Graduate School.

Students should make clear that they are applying for a dual enrollment program, and which one it is (J.D. and Ph.D., M.A., or M.P.A.).

Students whose applications are successful to one school and not the other, or who are not accepted into the dual enrollment program, shall be admitted to either of the schools separately.

B. Graduate Teaching/Research Assistantship Eligibility in the Graduate School

1. Students will be eligible for departmental assistantships only during such time as they are enrolled in the Graduate School and taking courses in the Political Science Department (see below), including PSC 699 Dissertation Research for students enrolled in the J.D./Ph.D. Typically, it is only students enrolled in the Ph.D. program who are awarded assistantships.

2. Law scholarships will apply for a maximum of six semesters and will apply only for semesters in which the student is predominately enrolled in Law School classes.
C. Tuition and Fees

Students in the dual enrollment programs pay tuition based upon University policies. Generally, students will pay tuition based on the school in which they are enrolled for the most hours.

D. Course of Study

1. Students spend their first year in the Law School completing the normal requirements of first year Law degree students.¹

2. Thereafter, students are expected to spend at least one year exclusively in the Department of Political Science.

3. During other years, courses may be divided between the Schools, but in any given semester, students will be enrolled in either the Graduate School or the Law School.

Students must remain in good standing with both the Graduate School and the Law School to remain a part of the dual enrollment program.

E. Political Science Credits & Degree Requirements

Note: students are again reminded that all of the regular Graduate School and Political Science degree requirements with regard to residency, plan of study, fields of study, comprehensive exams, dissertation committee, etc. are applicable.

1. Dual enrollment students are expected to complete the full requirements for the M.A./M.P.A. (36 Hours, or 30 Hours and a Master’s Thesis) or Ph.D. (60 hours and completion of a dissertation), including the field requirements for each degree. Students are strongly urged to decide on their fields of study as early as possible. Core courses in each field must be completed within the Department of Political Science Department. The department’s methodology requirements, however, may be waived, on a case-by-case basis, by the Graduate Director or, for Ph.D. students, the major field advisor in coordination with the Graduate Director. Law School courses may be applied toward degree requirements as follows:

First Semester (Hours)
600 Contracts I (2)
602 Torts (4)
603 Criminal Law (4)
608 Civil Procedure (4)
610 Legal Writing and Research (2)

Second Semester (Hours)
605 Contracts II (3)
601 Property (4)
609 Constitutional Law (4)
642 Evidence (3)
648 Research & Writing (Moot Court) (2)
a. Ph.D. Fifteen semester hours of elective Law School credits of a political science nature may be applied to the Ph.D. requirements. A maximum of six hours of Law courses per major field and three hours per minor field can be counted. Beyond the field and methods requirements, the Ph.D. program requires nine more hours, and these may be Law courses approved for any field or as electives.

b. M.A. Nine semester hours of elective Law School credit of a political science nature may be applied to the M.A. requirements. A maximum of one Law course for each of the three M.A. fields may be applied.

c. M.P.A. Fifteen hours of Law School credit may be applied toward the M.P.A., the details to be worked out with the M.P.A. advisor.

2. A list of courses within the Law School courses pre-approved for being considered for Political Science credit is appended. The list does not imply that other courses are necessarily excluded, including courses taught by visitors to the Law School. The list will change as future courses are added or changed; courses not on the list must be approved by Political Science faculty in the appropriate fields (i.e., American Politics, Comparative Politics, International Relations, Political Theory, and Public Administration). Such courses must be approved by the appropriate field faculty before the student can receive credit; students should obtain this approval (through their Department advisor) before taking any such courses.

3. Comprehensive Exams in Political Science

a. M.A. and M.P.A. students: the appropriate advisors will determine, with appropriate Law School faculty, the degree of involvement of Law School faculty in comprehensive exams.

b. Ph.D. students: Law School professors will offer questions for the student’s fields, participate in grading, and be given the option of participating in oral exams.

4. Advising

Dual-enrollment students will be advised on their Political Science course of study by an advisor within the Political Science Department. M.A. and Ph.D. students will be advised by the Director of Graduate Studies; M.P.A. students will be advised by the Director of the M.P.A. Program.

F. Law School Credits and Degree Requirements

To complete a J.D., dual-enrollment students will complete 75 credit hours within the Law School and 15 hours in the Department of Political Science that are approved for Law School credit, as indicated in the appended list.

The Dean of the Law School will determine a procedure for identifying a sufficient number of courses and credits within the Department of Political Science to meet the 15 hour requirement.
G. GPA

Courses taken in the Law School that count for credit in the Department of Political Science will not be computed as a part of the student’s graduate degree GPA. Likewise, courses taken in the Department of Political Science (or the Graduate School generally) will not be counted as a part of the law student’s overall GPA towards a JD.

H. Progress Toward Degrees

Dually-enrolled J.D. and M.A. or M.P.A. students are normally expected to receive both of their degrees in their 4th or 5th year of study.

Dually-enrolled J.D./Ph.D. students are expected to complete their law degree no later than 6 years from their entry into the Law School. Later graduation dates must be sought with the permission of the Dean of the Law School. Ph.D. degrees must be completed within eight years from the time of first registration in Ph.D. courses.

Students graduating from the J.D./M.A., J.D./M.P.A. and J.D./Ph.D. programs receive the diplomas of the Law School and the Graduate School.

Students in the dual enrollment program who do not complete their J.D. may receive credit for courses for which they receive a grade of “C” or better from the Law School, not to exceed 12 credit hours for Ph.D. students.

Students in the dual enrollment program who do not complete the M.A., M.P.A. or Ph.D. may receive credit toward the J.D. for 6 Political Science hours with a grade of “C” or better.
