Course Materials (available in the bookstore):

Franklin & Rabin: Cases and Materials on Tort Law and Alternatives
(10th ed. 2016).

Class Requirements:

Please be in your seat a few minutes before class is scheduled to begin. Late arrivals disrupt the class. Keep up with the reading and come to class each day prepared to participate in the discussion. I encourage you to volunteer when you have something to contribute.

Class participation may be a factor in your grade (potentially lowering your grade by one-third grade point – i.e., from a B to a B-). Such adjustments are very uncommon. Any lowered grades will be based on repeated failure to prepare for class or offer meaningful contributions.

Except as previously noted, your grade for the course will be based on the final examination.

You may use portable computers for note-taking (but not for other uses) during class. Cell phones should be turned off. Recording devices are generally prohibited. Please observe posted rules regarding food and drink in the classroom.
The Law School provides accommodations to students with physical, learning and other disabilities. Students with disabilities should contact Vice Dean James Leonard at (205) 348-5927 or jleonard@law.ua.edu, so that your needs can be evaluated.

Attendance:

You should plan on missing few if any classes. Keep track of your absences. If you miss 1-5 classes during the course of the semester, generally no prior notice or subsequent explanation is required. If you miss more than 5 classes during the course of the semester, please speak to me about it. I want to make sure that you are keeping up with the class and that any problems you may be experiencing are dealt with before they become serious problems. If you miss more than 9 classes, you must speak to Vice Dean Leonard. Students who exceed 9 absences usually have to re-take the course.

Course Objectives:

The objectives of the course are (1) to learn the basic principles of the common law of torts, including a few peculiarities of Alabama law; (2) to consider and debate the policies underlying those principles; and (3) by discussing the assigned cases, to develop skills in critical reasoning and advocacy.
SYLLABUS

This syllabus is subject to change, depending on the pace at which we proceed. I will provide the reading assignment for each class at the conclusion of the previous class. If I forget to do that, please remind me! You should expect to read, on average, about 3 new cases for each class session.

Page numbers below refer to the Franklin & Rabin textbook. Topics headings are to give you an overview of the subject matter to be covered in class. They do not necessarily correspond to individual class sessions.

You do not need to read pages that are not listed here, unless I tell you otherwise in class.

The two cases in brackets [] should be read for background to our discussion. In those instances I will not call on anyone to “recite the case.”
