Addresses for all relevant agencies are available through the National Conference of Bar Examiners.

State bar associations ask questions similar to these below in assessing character and fitness to practice law. Failure to disclose information requested may result in adverse action by the law school or a state bar association. If you answer “yes” to any question, you must submit an additional statement providing complete and accurate details, including dates and resolution.

CONTINUING DUTY TO DISCLOSE: If, following your completion of the law school application or this form, circumstances arise that would require you to answer “yes” to any question, you must submit an amendment to this application as soon as reasonably possible. Also, according to the Law School Student Handbook, the obligation to disclose any of the following information continues throughout law school and includes events occurring after enrollment.

A. Have you ever been arrested, charged with or convicted of a crime, including misdemeanors and traffic violations, or is any such charge pending or expected to be brought against you?
